

Descendents of Phillip Kuhlthau, Who Emigrated to America in 1848, Prominent in Milltown's Life and Development

New Brunswick owned its early growth to the people of several nationalities—English, Scotch, Irish, German, French and Hungarian. Milltown owes its development largely to citizens of German birth and extraction.

The Bergen mill disappeared in 1843 when Christopher Meyer, a citizen of Germany, used the water power for his rubber manufacturing plant, which really gave Milltown its start.

The first Kuhlthau to arrive in Milltown was Phillip. It was about 1850. He was the son of John Henry Kuhlthau and his wife, Barbara Lins, both of Oberzell, Germany.

In 1855, he went into business for himself, opening in Milltown a small grocery store, which prospered. He soon became one of Milltown's leading business men.

He was active in Republican politics and held responsible offices in the county. He was a freeholder and a member of North Brunswick township for ten years, justice of the peace, commissioner of deeds, collector and postmaster at Milltown for several terms.

There are about thirty-five Kuhlthaus living now in Milltown. Not long ago Christian Kuhlthau was renamed as the borough's postmaster, giving him the distinction of serving under three presidents.

tional Porcelain Company and vice-president of the Royston Paper Company. He was formerly a borough councilman and was first foreman of the fire company.

Other Milltown Kuhlthaus have been and are prominent in the life of the community. Still are others rising to prominence in various fields—business, medicine, law, politics, etc.

COST OF MEMORIAL

New Brunswick has no World War memorial, but it soon will have. It is something in which every New Brunswick resident should have and will have a part, under the financing plan adopted by the City Commission.

When hundreds of the city's young men responded to the call and went away, some never to return, there was much flag waving and cheering.

Those boys who went to France and their fathers and relatives will share in the cost of the construction of the memorial. If they are ready to do so, it cannot be conceived that a single individual among those who remained home while the fighting was going on in France would raise his voice against the project.

The cost of the memorial will be borne by every property owner in the city. The cost to each will be so small that none will feel it. It is estimated that each property owner with an assessment of $5,000 will not have to pay more than twenty-five cents a year.

The great preponderance of sentiment is in favor of the memorial, and the City Commissioners are being commended for their action by the citizens at large.

A WILL THAT SPEAKS

A will is an expressive, impressive instrument even when concise and couched in simple language. Often as not, it reveals in full the character, the disposition, the kindness of the person executing it as well as showing her or his interests in life.

The will of Mrs. Gertrude M. Cotton, who died March 21 in South Brunswick township, was probated a few days ago by Surrogate Charles Forman.

dam Street Reformed Church and Middlesex General Hospital, showing that she was a Christian and appreciative of the service rendered the afflicted by the hospital.

To an aunt are given andirons and tongs. To a cousin are given brass candlesticks, which are nearly 300 years old and originally the property of a great grandmother, with the request that they be kept in the family.

WHAT NEW JERSEY WILL SPEND

The New Jersey Legislature will pass, probably on Monday, the appropriations bill carrying $31,400,000 or thereabouts. But the total amount which this state will spend during the fiscal year beginning July 1 will be about $90,900,000.

When the appropriations bill came up for attention last week, the fighting Senator from Atlantic county, Emerson L. Richards, took the occasion to criticize this lack of an effective budget system or business-like method of appropriating funds for state affairs.

If Senator Richards keeps on fighting for economy and reform in government as he has during the winter, the Legislature, when it is recalled in special session in September, may really do something to revamp the present financial system and therefore in the future prevent abuses which have crept into it and which will be possible as long as it is existent.

SECRET MUST REMAIN

Some months ago when pictures of the Einstein theory were shown in New York City, so many tried to get into the lecture hall that police had to be called to keep order.

In substantiation of interest in science is the fact that daily, since the footprints of the cretaceous dinosaur were unearthed in the clay pits of the Hampton Clay Works in Woodbridge, crowds have assembled in the expectation of more discoveries.

These sightseers became so numerous and troublesome that Roy E. Anderson, manager of the clay works, announced that where the monster of a long ago age went on his walk will remain a secret for another six months.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.—My life has been one long happy holiday. Gilbert K. Chesterton, author—Art, like morality, consists in drawing the line somewhere. Fannie Hurst, author—It is surprising to me to see how placidly society in this country countenances the alimony-getting woman.

Better Than Saloon Days The Roy H. Minton of Metuchen leaves no doubt where he stands on the much-discussed prohibition question when he says:

"In the day of the saloon, our women and children could not walk three blocks on the main street without being compelled to pass a saloon, and be offended with its intolerable stench and often the leering touts that frequented it."
